CALIFORNIA: COLLEGES CUT KAPLAN TIE

The New York Times (daily newspaper)

By Tamar Lewin

Published: August 24, 2010

Nine months after Kaplan University signed an agreement with the chancellor of the overcrowded California community colleges, opening the way for students shut out of classes at their own campus to take an online version at Kaplan, the chancellor has canceled the agreement. In an Aug. 17 letter calling off the November memorandum of understanding, Barry Russell, the vice chancellor of academic affairs, cited concerns that it could have a “negative effect” on students who transferred to a California State University or University of California campus and could not get credit for the Kaplan course. Under the agreement, which was apparently never used at any of the state’s 112 community colleges, Kaplan was offering students a 42 percent discount, making the cost about $216 a credit, compared with $26 a credit at the community colleges.
